

Ever thought about becoming a trained emergency services peer educator ?

As part of the 'Volunteering in Emergency Management' project, Whittlesea Community Connections is looking for women, young people, and people from non-English speaking backgrounds who can speak English fluently interested in learning more about emergency response and prevention and in being trained in home fire safety by the Country Fire Authority.

You will receive training and will be supported to become a peer educator and to train other community members.

This is an excellent chance to develop your skills and enhance your employment opportunities and to help make your community safer.

Training will start in March.
The due date for applications is the 16th of February 2010

Interested?

For more information and to receive an application form call Whittlesea Community Connections on 03 9401 6666 and ask for Cinzia or send an e-mail to cpedrotti@whittleseacommunityconnections.org.au

'Volunteering in Emergency Management' is a project in partnership with:

